

Immigration

YourFirstName YourLastName

University title

Immigration

Name

(Institutional Affiliation)

According to a report by National Academics of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine, Immigrants in the United States are of great benefit to the Nation as opposed to being a liability. For instance, the report found out that the more immigrants continue to stay in the United States the more they improve their mastery of English. Apart from these, their education levels rise while at the same time increasing diversity regarding their jobs. As a result, a sociologist known as Waters C. Mary went ahead and concluded that Immigrants force of integration in the United States is very strong. The main aim of these report was to address the numerous contentious issues that surround the heated immigration debate. However, the report found that the stereotypes held against immigrants are all wrong as the report proved otherwise.

For instance according to Professor Walters, the report refutes the claim that Immigrants usually commit crimes more often than the Americans. It also goes ahead to dispute the claim that most immigrants are poor when it comes to health issues and that they pose a huge burden to the entire public healthcare system. Another wrong stereotype disapproved by the report is the claim that most immigrants fail to learn the English language. To be precise, the report found out that the desire to learn the English language on the part of the immigrants was very high. All these refutes the claim that immigrants are imposing their native languages on the American society. Health wise, immigrants are healthier than most Americans and less likely to suffer from heart diseases and other chronic illnesses.

REFERENCE:

Julia Preston. (2015). "The New York Times: Newest Immigrants Assimilating as Fast as Previous Ones, Report Says." Retrieved from http://www.nytimes.com/2015/09/22/us/newest-immigrants-assimilating-as-well-as-past-ones-report-says.html?_r=0. [Accessed on 12/9/2015].